Inflation slowdown plan goal

© N.Y. Times Service

WASHINGTON — The Carter administration plans to publish in a few days an anti-inflation program, with modest goals for gradually slowing the rate of price and wage increases and playing down visible government intervention in wage and price decisions.

"No grandstanding," one official said in describing the program. "We're going to try to open a dialogue quietly. You accomplish more when you don't try to take a lot of credit." Armed with improved numbers during cost data, the administration hopes to hold private discussions with labor and management well in advance of contract negotiations.

Whether this low-key approach, backed by some other proposals, will strike the faltering stock market and the business community as adequate is unclear. Most economists agree that the situation is dangerous because inflation has persisted at a high rate, almost 6 per cent, despite slack in the economy. Slowing the rate of inflation is difficult and takes time, but an acceleration could occur rapidly.

The new steel contract announced Saturday illustrates why the Carter administration, like its predecessor, finds inflation to be an intractable problem. The 300,000 steel workers won a 3-year contract that a union spokesman said would add about 10 percent a year to their hourly compensation, including estimated cost-of-living increases.

Assuming the industry is going to keep its price, a year, labor costs would still rise 7 per cent a year, driving up steel prices and boosting the cost of goods made from steel.

"Then the union and the industry will be come to Washington for protection from imports," an official predicted bitterly.

No one in Washington argues that workers' purchasing power shouldn't keep up with the cost of living. Union leaders, of course, want to do better than that.

Given this pattern, and occasional inflationary pressures from the oil cartel and disappointing crops, inflation looms as a self-sustaining force.

The White House statement, due near the end of this week according to various sources, will include a variety of proposals to improve industrial productivity; curb government practices that raise costs and prices; bring labor and management together informally in an effort to hold down wages and prices and to strengthen the government's ability to implement cost-increasing production "bottlenecks" and manufacturing improvements.

It is expected that Carter will create a labor-management advisory committee, in part to avoid having to negotiate with, or rebuff, George Meany, president of the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations, on the labor membership.

Carter continues to be interested in bringing together employers and labor leaders, especially some of the younger ones from outside the leadership of the AFL-CIO. The most likely outcome will be no formal committee but meetings from time to time at the President's request.

What could be the administration's most innovative and economically important anti-inflation proposal: to reduce Social Security payroll taxes paid by employees and employers, expected to be presented by President Carter on April 20 as part of his national energy plan. The administration has been considering replacing some Social Security revenues with the proceeds from higher taxes on energy that Carter is expected to propose, especially an increase in the federal gasoline tax and a levy on coal and petroleum.

A variation on this that the administration is considering would be to add additional massive taxes to increase federal revenue-sharing payments to those states that reduce general sales taxes. Such reductions would lower prices of most retail goods, bringing down the cost of living and restoring to consumers the purchasing power drained off by the higher gasoline tax.

The Carter administration, like the Ford administration, holds no hope for a rapid slowdown in inflation. As in 1976, the basic underlying rate of price increases is 5% to 6 per cent.

Springing forth

WARM SPRING weather in the past week has brought May flowers and fruit trees into bloom in the Magic Valley area, seemingly within a matter of hours at times. Spring's welcome beauty is welcome after a cold winter, but many Idahoans would concur that April showers equally welcome now. (Times-News color photo by R. Charles Lehman.)

Rural growth key

MOSCOW, Idaho (UPI) — A University of Idaho economist said today prosperity of Idaho's cities is rooted in the soil and plants for continued urban-economic growth must be keyed to rural development.

Economist Nell Rimbey said Idaho cities would reap huge economic benefits if development programs could be aimed at one major target — increasing the farmers' income by $10 for each acre of land farmed.

For each $1 million added to the farm sector's gross income, he said, the entire local economy would receive new revenue in excess of $3.7 million.

Immediate benefits — to the extent of $1.4 million — would be realized in the local economy as farmers spent their $1 million for goods and services, he said.

Rimbey said UI studies in the Jerome-Wendell area show that "if each dollar of direct income to farmers, 40 cent of additional income will accrue to other sectors of the local economy."

Before long, an increased income in the local economy from increased consumer spending, resulting from increased consumer spending, the economist said, additional income of $2.3 to $2.4 million would be generated in the local economy.

"Consumer spending rises because income in the area has increased and possibly more people are being employed, with more dollars circulating through the local economy," Rimbey said.

He said through an agriculture-based program of economic development, Idaho cities could build their economic strength without experiencing the painful problems associated with other types of development and growth.

"First, there is the problem of urban sprawl," Rimbey said. "New shopping centers, manufacturing plants and housing developments replace many acres of productive agricultural land each year in the U.S. This large-scale diversion of land does not occur in an agriculture-based economic development."

Moreover, the usual forms of development greatly increase demands on public services such as sewage treatment facilities, schools, highways and police protection. These costs of economic growth can be held to a minimum with development based on a rural-urban partnership,"

Rimbey said Latah County, where crops are on 250,000 acres or 35 per cent of the land, was an example of how agriculture can stimulate an area's economic strength.

"If Latah County farmers receive $10 additional income from each acre of cropland, their spending power would rise by $2.5 million," he said.

Nuclear policy isolating US

PERSEPOLIS, Iran (UPI) — President Carter's nuclear controls policy has isolated the United States from its atomic allies and could threaten the Nonproliferation Treaty, delegates to a nuclear conference said today.

An informal poll among delegates of 41 nations attending the Iran Conference on Transfer of Nuclear Technology found little or no support for President Carter's announcement the United States would cease commercial reprocessing of spent fuel involving plutonium and delay introduction of commercial fast breeder reactors.

Robert Thomas, U.S. Energy Research and Development Administrator, told the policy had "severely isolated the United States from the military and political influence of Western European nuclear administration who believe in more sharing of atomic knowhow with developing nations."

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Carter and his family today mingled with thousands of children frolicking on the White House south lawn during the traditional Easter egg roll.

Carter, at times carrying grandson Jason on his shoulders, walked along a temporary barrier erected to contain the visitors. Then he joined the crowd, which officials said swelled to 8,700 two hours after the start of the event.

First Lady Rosalynn Carter and 9-year-old daughter Amy also moved among the crowd while Miss Lillian, the President's mother, watched from a wheelchair on a second-level balcony.

"I think it's great," said Rosalynn. "I think everyone is having a good time."

Amy presented a small fair and helped 20-month-old Jason roll an egg along the concrete aisle. Imitating his grandfather, Jason waved at the crowd. The child flew to Washington with the first family from Colham, Ga., Sunday night.

Amy found that her tree house was as much of an attraction as the larger home she shares with her parents.

In addition to the egg-rolling contest, small stages were scattered around the rolling grounds for various entertainment, including marionettes and a cowboy doing rope tricks.

The White House also had farm animals brought in, including a 1,200-pound steer, a chicken and a large white rabbit. Children eight years old and younger, accompanied by an adult are allowed on the south lawn for the festivities, an Easter Monday tradition dating to the administration of Rutherford B. Hayes.

Cloves, cloggers, farm animals, magicians and puppets were lined up by the National Park Service to entertain the children, along with the military service bands.

Many of today's visitors kept turning toward the White House itself, occasionally waving at people they would glimpse walking near it in hopes of catching a glimpse of the members of the first family. For the most part, they waved at maid-and Secret Service agents.

RUSSIAN trawler Taras Shevchenko, a 120-tonner, believed to be stopped by the U.S. Coast Guard cutter Dallas, March 1, arrived in Boston under Coast Guard escort today after being seized on President Carter's order. The ship is the first seized under the United States' new 200-mile fishery management and conservation limit. (UPI)

By United Press International
National Guardsmen fought forest fires in warm, gusty winds in the Midwest Sunday. Monday. Heavy rains broke a 10-day dry spell in south Florida.

Minnesota Gov. Rudy Perpich called the National Guard to duty Sunday night to help battle 16 major blazes in the Hibbing and Virginia areas. The governor toured the northern Minnesota fire areas Monday.

Two large fires burned more than 1,000 acres each and one burned six houses. A state forester said all fires were contained Monday but were not considered under control.

A National Guard unit was called out in northwest Missouri Sunday to bring under control a fire that burned about 400 acres at Thomas Hills State Park near Kirksville. Firefighters also helped extinguish a fire about 20 miles northwest of Macon, Mo.

In excessively windy conditions, firemen at Des Moines, Iowa, battled 22 grass fires Saturday and Sunday.

"Most of them are illegal fires, like people trying to get rid of old tires," said Mike Grulic, fire department dispatcher. "Because it was windy, some of the fires got a little out of control."

A strong surge of warm air from the South sent temperatures to record highs for the date in much of the Midwest Sunday, and readings in the 80s were expected again Monday in much of the central and southeastern parts of the country.

The highest temperature reported Sunday in the 48 contiguous states was 93 at McCook, Neb. Record temperatures were reported as far south as Duluth, Minn., where the mercury hit 80. Kentucky also had record highs, 91 at Lexington and 91 at Louisville.

Up to 4 inches of rain fell in Miami's suburbs — the first rain in a month — and winds accompanied the rain, felling power lines throughout the area.

"This is a vicious storm," a spokesman for Florida Power and Light Co. said. "I've never seen a storm come whipping through like this."

One blast knocked out a substation serving 10,960 customers in north Dade County. Power was restored about an hour later.

Shows and thunderstorms fell in the southern High Plains early today and widely-scattered showers and thunderstorms were spread from northeast New Mexico across eastern Colorado and western Kansas.

People in flood-prone areas celebrated Easter in temporary shelters and closed-church halls.

Oil profits target

KUWAIT (UPI) — The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will soon take special measures to reduce the profit margins of the international oil companies, the Kuwaiti newspaper As Sayyaf said today.

It gave no specific details on the proposed measures, but said OPEC experts will meet in Vienna Tuesday to discuss new terms that would minimize and standardize profit margins allowed for the world's oil companies in terms of concessions or buyers of crude oil from OPEC members.

The proposed new measures will constitute a new milestone in future relations between the producing countries and the international oil companies, the newspaper said.

Question...

Are funeral expenses included in automobile insurance policies containing "medical payment" coverage?

Answer...

Subject to certain exceptions funeral expenses up to the specified limit of the "medical payment coverage" — usually $500.00 or $1000.00 for each person — are payable upon the death of the named insured or those resident relatives of the named insured if disabled from any accident within one year of injury in any automobile accident. In addition, other persons not related to the insured but riding with permission in his car are likewise covered.

Some states have enacted "no fault" automobile liability statutes. In most of these statutes a specific amount is specified for funeral costs. When "no fault" insurance applies it replaces "medical payments."

Peres wins party post

TEL AVIV, Israel (UPI) — Defense Minister Shimon Peres won the Labor party's nomination for prime minister by an overwhelming margin Sunday and immediately sought to assure the United States he wants to solve the Middle East crisis.

The 54-year-old Peres, previously known for his hardline views on peace with the Arabs, faced his first challenge today with the threatened withdrawal of a dovish coalition partner.

The leftist party, Mapai, scheduled a morning meeting to decide whether to stay within the fold of the ruling Labor party or go it alone in the May 17 general election. Labor's 816-member central committee chose the unchallenged Peres in a unusually short 15-minute meeting. Eight party members voted "no" and 10 others abstained. Peres replaced Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin as Labor's candidate following Rabin's resignation Thursday because of a scandal involving an illegal bank account he and his wife maintained in Washington.

The Polish-born Peres, a tough bargainer at the peace table, has so far quickly sought to assure the United States he is serious about peace in the Middle East.

President Carter previously signaled his hope that a new prime minister would "push forward" toward peace.

"In spite of the personal changes that took place in the major party of this country, there won't be any substantial changes in the policy of Israel," Peres told a news conference.

"Namely," he said, "we shall continue to strive for meaningful negotiations with the neighboring Arab countries in order to achieve a complete peace in the Middle East." He said he did not foresee a new war.

French rearm Zaire

PARIS (UPI) — French military transports flew arms and supplies from Morocco to Zaire government troops today in a move the French Communist party condemned as "a dangerous decision" and unconstitutional.

French Foreign Minister Jean-Pierre Treanell and DC3 cargo planes were flying arms from Morocco to Zaire government troops and Moroccan soldiers fighting invaders in copper-rich Shaba province.

President Mobutu Sese Seko of Zaire had appealed for aid in his government's month-long battle against the invaders in Shaba.

Clashes continue

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Palestinian guerrillas and right-wing Christians today fought artillery and mortar battles near the Israeli border, ignoring Syrian appeals to stop the month-long conflict, reports from the south said.

Despite their initial losses, rightist militiamen trained a steady barrage of shells on Palestinian positions at Kiflum and the surrounding hills only a few miles from the Israeli border, the reports said.

Palestinian guerrillas returned the fire, but there were no signs of fresh advances by ground troops.

"Both sides seem to have settled into their fortified positions and are shelling each other in what looks like a war of attrition," one report said. Travelers from the region said at least a dozen were killed and more than two dozen wounded over the weekend.

Rightist sources said leaders of the main right-wing political parties will consult privately today in preparation for a planned visit to Damascus this week by Phalangist party leader Pierre Gemayel.

A ranking Syrian government official held several meetings during the weekend with Lebanese political leaders.

Thai tensions rising

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — Thailand — Laos — has declared a state of emergency because of deteriorating relations with neighboring Thailand — diplomats in the Laos capital said today. Residents of Vientiane reportedly were digging shelters and tanks were on the streets of the capital, reports from the capital said. The U.S. diplomatic staff in Vientiane was not affected by the alert, Western diplomats said. The United States has about 12 persons stationed at the embassy there.

The alert was declared after a week of stories — generally regarded as fanciful — in the Thai press in Bangkok claiming a split in the Laos government and a tank attack on Vientiane by anti-government forces.

US Latin efforts seen failing

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A high-powered commission that studied U.S.-Latin American affairs from a "conservative" viewpoint says that no matter what President Carter proposes toward improving relations, the effort probably will fail.

In advance of Carter's address to the Organization of American States later this week, the Commission on Critical Choices for Americans — sponsored by former Vice President Nelson Rockefeller — has published a book, "Latin America: Struggle for Progress." It concludes, in part:

"...There is very little in the record that suggests radical improvement is possible over the next 10 years. It is more likely...the U.S. government will be criticized in Latin America no matter what it does. 'The United States will be the scapegoat for regimes uncertain of their legitimacy and eager to seek internal cohesion at the expense of the United States.'

The bipartisan group of 42 prominent Americans was brought together by Rockefeller before he became vice president in 1977.

Co-author Roger Foisant, a Latin American expert at Georgetown University, described the book as "a conservative response to current conventional wisdom" on Latin America. The other author is James Therber, the U.S. ambassador to Nicaragua.

They assume "Fidel Castro" will still be around in 1985, but they say Cuba poses a serious threat to the United States only if it becomes another Cuban government and if such a move involves a close military alliance among these nations, Cuba and the Soviet Union.

Californians fund Nixon's TV show

By EVERETT R. HOLLES

© N.Y. Times Service

SAN DIEGO — The filming of Richard M. Nixon's television interviews, with David Frost, is being financed by a group of 19 investors, almost all of them San Diegans, who have put up approximately $270,000 to cover all technical production costs of the four-part series.

The promoters of the half-shading venture, Dr. Kenneth Major and Dennis Senn, declined to identify the other investors but said "quite a few" were residents of the wealthy and conservative San Diego community of La Jolla, where Nixon still has many staunch defenders.

The former President's television "memories," for which he reportedly is receiving $600,000, are being syndicated to individual stations for simultaneous evening broadcast in four weekly segments of 90 minutes each, beginning on May 4.

The six hours of interviews will be condensed from 24 of videotaped questions and answers now being recorded in a heavily guarded residence home in South Laguna, 12 miles up the coast from the Nixon villa in San Clemente.

The money raised by Major and Senn has been invested with Renken Associates, which they formed here last June 8 especially to handle the filming, editing and other costs of Pacific Video Industries, Inc., Hollywood, which is co-producing the Nixon series as a speculative joint venture with Frost.

The investors have been promised a quick and handsome profit, perhaps as high as 300 percent or more, from Pacific Video's share of the earnings, according to the two promoters, neither of whom have ever met Nixon.

"We have passed the break-even point," said Major, 34-year-old director of Academic Support Services at the University of California's San Diego campus.

"On the basis of the latest statement of revenues and commitments that we've received this weekend, our investors are secure and the profits already are substantial."

Major and Senn said their personal investments amounted to about 30 per cent of the reported $270,000, indicating that each of the 17 others in the group subscribed an average of slightly over $11,000.

Some of the investors were said to be highly critical of Nixon while others remain ardent admirers. But all "realize the exciting historical importance of these interviews and the opportunity for great profits," added Senn, 29, a former chairman of Renken Associates and a director of Pacific Video Industries.

He added that the investor group covered a wide spectrum, including professional investors, land developers, small business, retired executives and a few former military leaders. He said none of them, to his knowledge, was a personal friend of the former President.

Frost quoted one of the first and largest investors — reported to be a retired industrialist of La Jolla — as declaring that "I don't care whether I make a penny out of this if I can help provide Mr. Nixon the opportunity to tell the nation his side of the story."

Jack Meyer, president of Pacific Video Industries who was working with Frost this week on one of the recent sessions, said that the first two hours of his time technical costs would run in excess of $250,000.

He estimates the total cost of the programs at $2 million, including the reported $600,000 payment to Nixon by Frost, the British talk show personality and producer of "package" programs who several years ago became well known to American viewers with such programs as "That Was the Week That Was."

Meyer, Major and Senn all declined, however, to discuss the payment being made to Nixon.

The final videotaping session with Nixon in South Laguna, eight of which will have been completed by this weekend, is scheduled for April 20, after which Meyer and Frost will begin editing 24 hours of raw tape into six hours of broadcast material.

Meyer's role as co-producer of the Nixon series under an 80-page joint venture contract with Frost's Paradise Productions, Incorporated — Frost's contract with Nixon is covered in 13 pages — had not previously been disclosed.

"I am not being hired by Mr. Frost; I own a substantial part of the Nixon package," Meyer said.

Meyer said Frost's overriding concern had been one of security, to guard against any premature leak of the former President's responses to his questions prior to actual airing of the programs on May 4, 12, 19 and 25 in prime evening time from 7:30 to 9 o'clock.

As a further safeguard, the four programs will be delivered to more than 125 American television stations over leased telephone lines at the time of broadcast, instead of being sent by air express in advance as is customary with syndicated programs.

Senn disagreed with Meyer's figure of $2 million for the total costs of the Nixon programs, or the estimate of $3 million in revenues from 24 minutes of national advertising time on the four segments. Both the costs and revenues were to be considerably higher in Senn's opinion.

The estimate of 24 minutes of national advertising on each program at a reported cost of $125,000 a minute, is not the only source of revenue from the Nixon programs, however.

In addition to the 125 or more television stations in this country which reportedly will carry the interviews, the four programs were said to have been sold abroad in at least 10 countries.

The Mutual Broadcasting System, with 730 affiliates, has purchased the programs for radio broadcasting simultaneously with the telecasts. And the large entertainment conglomerate, Music Corporation of America, has purchased the rights to rental of the filmed interviews to schools, libraries and private groups.

What does it mean?

A 'character study' of Hemingway

Elmer Gertz is a Chicago attorney, professor at John Marshall Law School and biographer of Frank Harris. He compares him with Henry Miller — to whom he added, later this year — by Southern Illinois University Press.

By ELMER GERTZ

By FORCE OF WILL: The Life and Art of Ernest Hemingway, by Scott Donaldson (Viking, $13.95). —

There have been innumerable books and essays about Ernest Hemingway, that tantalizing and troubled man of letters and works has been covered. Why, then, another book about this man, who has been so praised, criticized, built up and torn down?

Scott Donaldson's study proves that the Hemingway theme was not been exhausted, in a vast literature, filled to overflowing with repetitions, platitudes and occasional verities, this book has an honorable end, I believe, lasting place. It is extremely well researched, seldom pedantic or tedious. In many respects highly original and generally well written and interesting.

As the author himself points out, it is not a biography, nor a personal memoir, nor a critical study of Hemingway's works, not a venture in comparative literature. It is, as claimed, a character study.

Just what does this mean?

Donaldson, exploring in-depth Hemingway's writings and excavating calmly a vast mine of biographical material, uncovers what Hemingway actually wrote and thought on such complexities as love, marriage, sex, politics, politicians, money, religion, sports, war, his friends and foes, the good, bad and indifferent things of life.

Hemingway did not often agree with himself or, certainly not, with others in any of these or other respects. There were contradictions galore. He was often on several sides of a subject, sometimes simultaneously. One might say that it was characteristic of him to have no consistent viewpoint or course of conduct. If not all things to all men, he says at the very least, changeable.

He was self-deceived, as well as misleading to others. He seldom doubted his own sincerity, despite these contradictions of viewpoint and character.

Sometimes he may have been tormented by the maze in which he traveled, but, as often as not, he was unaware of the lack of set purpose. A person who is all of a piece is often a very little piece. Indeed, Hemingway was a considerable man and writer and he necessarily encompassed much that could not be neatly tied together.

Donaldson illustrates this in many ways. Only occasionally does he fail to be fully aware of that there can be said about any aspect of the subject. Perhaps because he is a special kind of Frank Harris, I note, with some surprise, that Donaldson fails to make mention that Hemingway wrote a parody of Harris' memoirs, "My Life," as far back as 1931.

In some respects, Hemingway's character and writings paralleled those of Harris. Both made monumental misrepresentations as to what they did and, indeed, created a vast self-mythology: both had large appetites for sex, wine, super-exaltations generally; both had special feelings for bullfighting and wrote great stories of that peculiar Spanish art.

One should not carry the similarity too far, but it should not be ignored either.

In the same way, Donaldson is largely silent about Hemingway's generally unfavorable attitude toward the Jews. (Hemingway's son Gregory is not silent here.) He does deal at length with Hemingway's special relationship with one literary Jew, whom he depicts as a largely despicable character in one of his first masterpieces, "The Sun Also Rises"; Harold

Loch, author of "The Professor Likes vodka."

Hemingway also denigrated Gertrude Stein, to whom he owed so much. It is only fair to say that, at times, he maligned persons of every faith, ethnic origin and station in life. His was largely a critical attitude, rather than one of acceptance and empathy. Few friends or wives escaped his malice.

Donaldson develops the now familiar theme that much of the hatred and tragedy in Hemingway's life and works and the inadequacies from which he suffered arose from his utterly unsatisfactory relationship with his parents, particularly his mother. One could write a casebook in psychiatry based solely on this and story.

It was his tendency to build up and then to destroy because he always feared that no one would include, call him up to his ideals.

Out of this heartbreak grew the great body of Hemingway's work. One can read all that he wrote for its own sake, without thought for its essential background. So considered, he is, of course, one of the masters of the literature of our time.

His achievements are not diminished, but enlarged, when one learns how they evolved, what convolutions of character they represent. Indeed, it is a very remarkable accomplishment to have transmuted personal tragedies and idiosyncrasies in such fashion.

It has been said that all great art is autobiographical. A human story is not necessarily grand. As often as not, it arises from that which is crass and inglorious. The wonder is that such human travails can beget so much that is illuminating and inspiring.

Donaldson was wise in his assumption that by depicting Hemingway's character, he would give us the ingredients of his greatness, as well as his littleness. His book bears reading and rereading.

What Angela Davis can and cannot do now

By ROGER SIMON

Chicago Sun-Times

CHICAGO — As the most famous Communist in America, there are certain things that Angela Davis is not allowed to do. She is not allowed to change from what she was 10 years ago, for instance. She is not allowed in any way, to disagree with whatever image we have of her.

And most of all, she is definitely not allowed to sitchampion on top of skyscrapers.

"We aren't supposed to do what human beings do I guess," she said and laughed. Laughing is another thing she is not supposed to do, but she does it anyway. She was in Chicago for the opening of the film "Brother," a fictionalized account of a police killing. Afterward, she was supposed to go to a clambake cocktail party on the 69th floor of one of the city's most elegant skyscrapers.

"We aren't supposed to do what human beings do I guess," she said and laughed. Laughing is another thing she is not supposed to do, but she does it anyway. She was in Chicago for the opening of the film "Brother," a fictionalized account of a police killing. Afterward, she was supposed to go to a clambake cocktail party on the 69th floor of one of the city's most elegant skyscrapers.

The press licked its lips in anticipation. Live on stage — one night only — Angela Davis drinks champagne from a crystal goblet! The location, however, was changed by one of the organizers to a nonluxury hotel on the fringes of the Loop. They decided to keep the champagne. "We had cocktail parties back, then, too," Miss Davis said, and laughed again. "Back then" referred to a time when Miss Davis' picture was more likely to appear in a wanted poster than a movie screen. "Last time I was here, somebody wrote that I wasn't wearing my jeans and Army jacket anymore. Well, I don't think I EVER wore an Army jacket. I can't help whatever image people have created for me. I guess I am supposed to go around and be raggedy for them I am not going to be a caricature."

Baton twirling majorette, Girl Scout, magna cum laude graduate of one of these monstrosities ever to be on the FBI's Most Wanted List, Angela Davis was all of these things. Her FBI wanted poster sits on my desk. It says that Angela Yvonne Davis, age 26, occupation teacher, race Negro, is wanted for interstate flight, murder and kidnapping, charges she was later acquitted of.

The pictures on the poster are of the Angela Davis most of us remember — the huge Afro hairstyle and the stern expression. Both of those are gone now, but other things are not. Miss Davis is no less a radical or revolutionary than she was 10 years ago. The only difference is that she does not get recognized on the street anymore.

"There is a difference between now and the '60s and early '70s," she said. "But it is not what most people have made it out to be. The Movement is not dead. There is a deeper political consciousness now than there was then."

"More people are involved and are prepared to do something than ever before. We just don't have as many organized structures. We don't have the demonstrations, marches that we once had. But we are on the verge of developing an organizational movement, even greater than before."

Miss Davis had just finished a live local television interview. She was in the holding room waiting for her next interview, this one on national radio.

"The repetition of the late '60s and early '70s was really devastating, but I think things are worse now," she said. "There is a worsening of racism and repression. The economic condition of black people is worse. I saw a story that black people in Chicago are worse off today than 10 years ago. Police brutality has increased. We have SWAT teams and dum dum bullets and Vietnam technology being used by police forces."

Miss Davis is now a director of the National Alliance Against Racism and Political Repression, an umbrella group containing "Communists and Democrats and everybody in between," she said.

But her most recent public exposure came not from that group but from the movie "Network." In which a money-hungry revolutionary willing to sell out the Movement for high TV ratings was believed to be a caricature of her. It was the one subject she spoke on with something approaching anger.

"It was a total distortion," she said. "It was vicious and disgusting. She seemed to say that I was worse, more negative. 'And,' she said, "I was not and I am not."

Miss Davis was fired from her teaching job for being a Communist, rehired after a lawsuit and fired again. She is now on a leave of absence from another teaching job, at Claremont Colleges in California, and is writing a book.

"The lies of the nation are linked to the capitalist system," she said. "What people are trying to do is achieve sovereignity over their lives. Jimmy Carter definitely owes something to the black Americans who elected him, but I do not think he is going to deliver."

The riots, the rebellions of some years ago was the people, spontaneously expressing decades of accumulated repression. The violence was important although tragic. We can't expect to develop a mass movement today by advocating violence and explosion."

The leaders of that era, of violence and explosion, have, for the most part, not fare very well. Some are in hiding, many are dead, some have gone into politics or religion. I have found that the world of then is not the world of now.

"I ran from the FBI for two years," Miss Davis said. "I was in jail in solitary confinement, for 16 months. That gave me strength. All I can do now is continue. All I can do is continue the struggle."

Attorney gain charged in Corona retrial bid

SALINAS, Calif. (UPI) — Lawyers for convicted-mass murderer Juan Corona are seeking a new trial on the ground his original attorney was more interested in personal gain than in his client's welfare.

Richard Hawk, former attorney for the farm-labor contractor, is among those to appear at a Monterey County Superior Court hearing beginning today.

Corona, 43, was convicted in 1970 of tracking and stabbing to death 25 migrant laborers and burying their bodies in shallow graves in orchards near Yuba City.

In a brief filed in the state District Court of Appeals, Corona's new court-appointed lawyers argued that psychiatric tests for Corona — which were opposed by Hawk — might have prevented the trial and thereby meant a personal loss for Hawk.

"A mental incompetency finding would have made the trial considerably less appealing to the reading public" and "would have reduced sales" of Hawk's planned book on Corona, said attorneys Michael Mendelson and Alan

JUAN CORONA
... new trial sought

Excerpts.

As part of his fee, Hawk obtained the rights to Corona's life story. He later collaborated with his trial assistant in writing the book, "Burden of Proof."

Documents filed with the court said Hawk was aware before the Solano County trial that Corona had been confined to a mental hospital for three months in 1958; had been described as "mentally ill" in a search warrant filed at the time of his arrest in May 1971; had been diagnosed as psychotic by a Yuba City psychiatrist in 1971; and was described as "a hazard to himself or others" by a doctor at the California Medical Facility at Vacaville in March 1972.

In ordering the hearing, the appellate court said it wanted to know why Hawk did not consider a mental incompetency defense. If he "properly evaluated and analyzed" reports by psychiatrists who examined Corona after his arrest and why Hawk objected "so vehemently" when Superior Court Judge Richard Patten suggested the possibility of further psychiatric tests for Corona.

Corona is currently serving a life sentence at the California Training Facility at Soledad. A California Department of Corrections psychiatrist who examined him last year said Corona suffers from "schizophrenia, paranoid type."

Big cars gain top spot on nation's sales lists

Detroit (UPI) — It may be only a swan song, but the big-car symbol of a pre-energy-crisis America is once again atop the sales charts.

The standard-sized 1977-model Chevrolet, 700 pounds lighter and a foot shorter than last year's model, was the No. 1-selling car in the United States in the first three months of 1977.

Last year, it gave up the top spot to the mid-sized Oldsmobile Cutlass. There were only 7,500 sales separating the two so far this year and the Cutlass could "regain" its premier spot once the revised, smaller 1978 models are introduced this fall.

The "Top 10" sales list so far this year has seven mid-sized or larger automobiles on it and just three compacts, the Ford Granada sixth, the Plymouth Volare eighth and the Chevrolet Nova ninth. There's not a single subcompact "subcompact" model on the list.

In terms of sales through March, the "Top 10" domestic makes were: 1. Oldsmobile, Intermediate; 2. Oldsmobile Cutlass; 3. Ford LTD; 4. Chevrolet Monte Carlo; 5. Ford Thunderbird (the first time it's cracked the best-seller list); 6. Ford Granada; 7. Oldsmobile 88-98; 8. Plymouth Volare; 9. Chevrolet Nova and 10. Chevrolet Chevelle.

Iaceco said the shift over the past 2½ years has been to the middle part of the market, with small car buyers moving "up and large car buyers often moving down a notch."

The compact and the intermediate levels of the "Top 10" sales list for this year are "the real heart of the market," he said. "But obviously the market for five and six-passenger cars and wagons still exists. It's no mystery why people are buying them."

"True, as a percentage of the total industry, small cars are not selling as well as they were last year or two years ago. They simply need them."

AMA seeks apology in fund lists

© Chicago Sun-Times
CHICAGO — The American Medical Association has demanded a public apology from the federal government, claiming a 65 per cent error rate in a list of Medicare payments to doctors made public last month.

The AMA said it figured the error rate after surveying 208 of the 409 doctors identified by the Health, Education and Welfare Department as receiving more than $100,000 each in Medicare payments in 1975.

The AMA said it had delivered a copy of the survey and the demand for an apology to HEW Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. Friday afternoon.

There has been a continuing controversy over the accuracy of the federal Medicare figures. Califano's office conceded "there were some errors" in the figures.

FBI probes gang deaths

NEW YORK (UPI) — The FBI is investigating a score of gangland-style killings which included "hits" on a number of government informants and potential prosecution witnesses, Time magazine says in its current issue.

The magazine said FBI agents feared the killings may represent "a direct challenge by the mob to the U.S. government."

Time said several of the victims were either FBI informants or potential government witnesses. All of the murders were committed with 22-caliber automatic pistols, a 1970s-style weapon not commonly used by mobsters, the magazine said.

The slain men included Frank Chin, a professional wiretapper killed in New York last January; and Vincent Capone, a New Jersey loan shark killed in August 1976.

No comment from Cleaver

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — When asked if his conversion to Christianity isn't an effort to stay out of jail, former Black Panther leader Eldridge Cleaver says that people didn't believe Jesus Christ either.

"I don't bother to answer that question," Cleaver said.

Cleaver, 41, is to go on trial May 9 in Oakland, Calif., on three counts of assault with intent to kill and three counts of assault on Oakland police. From a 1968 Black Panther shootout with police.

She heads bank at 14

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI) — Jackie Brown is something of a novelty in the world of finance. She's a 14-year-old bank president.

"I don't think of myself as president of a bank. I just think of myself as anybody else," says Miss Brown, president of the Lewis Fox Middle School Community Bank in Hartford.

Backed by three local banks, Miss Brown and nine other students have opened up a bank in their school which offers free check-cashing services.

The bank cashes about $600 worth of paychecks each week for students employed in school-related work programs.

Joseph Rauh on rights

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Joseph Rauh, a civil rights lawyer, says the best thing about the Carter administration in the civil rights field is the "third echelon" government employees who graduated from the civil rights and antiracism movements.

Appearing on the syndicated television show America's Black Forum Sunday, Rauh told Attorney General Griffin-Bell he is "a straight out segregationist" and his deputy, Peter Flaherty, "was for defying an order" — a legal idea which wanted to integrate the schools of Pittsburg.

Police hypnotize neighbors

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (UPI) — Police hypnotized neighbors of a slain woman to make a drawing of suspects in her slaying and the kidnapping of her two children, one of whom suffers cystic fibrosis.

Two neighbors of Beverly Wyse, 26, were hypnotized for four hours during the weekend. From details they provided, police artists made profile and full-face drawings of two men seen near the home.

The drawings were to be distributed today throughout the western states.

Vallee backs Hall of Fame

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) — Rudy Vallee, a top singer and bandleader in the heyday of network radio, is planning to establish an entertainment Hall of Fame in his resort city.

Vallee said he would donate some of his well-worn saxophones and musical memorabilia and get other famous entertainers to do the same.

The 72-year old entertainer was here Saturday to judge the annual Boardwalk Easter Parade and to perform at a reception for the winners.

Moscow Easter rites draw crowds

© N.Y. Times Service

MOSCOW — Anticipating

hunting in the early midnight air,

Well over 1,000 Muscovites,

many of them young, strained against the steel barriers that had been erected to keep them away from St. Nicholas-at-the-

Walls Church, Moscow's

Komsomol Project.

Worshippers had begun

arriving several hours earlier

for the Easter service.

Police at checkpoints sorted them out, letting through many of the elderly and turning away younger people. Inside, the fenced

churchyard, depulated

volunteers from the Komsomol or Young Communist League, which requires its members to be atheists, helped push back

new arrivals looking for a place inside the full church.

"It's nearly time," an old woman in a woollen shawl

whispered to her neighbors, and they lit their slender orange candles. The church doors opened. Led by uniformed

police, the procession

filed out, carrying crosses, ikons and canopies. "It's midnight," singing around the small church in a symbolic search, for the risen Christ. The crowd out on the street surged for ward for a look and the church bells rang out, a message that would shortly rise in a shout

from the church itself:

"Christos vaskres!" Christ is risen!

Before the revolution,

the pealing Easter bells — 1,000 of them by one account — would have roused all Moscow at midnight. The officially orthodox believers

ecumenical solidarity with

Baptists in the Ukraine,

Ukrainians in Estonia and Catholics in Lithuania. Even among nonreligious Russians,

Easter tends to be a sentimental holiday when the family sits down to the annual cake of "kulich"

and the raisin-studded sweet cheese pudding of "paskha."

Of late, some local ideological lecturers have stressed that young people must not be seduced by the religious beauty of Easter. The athletes — Nautek —

Religion admitted late last year that such church holidays were becoming faddish among teenagers who were lascivious by the ritual. "Our athletes can turn onto the christian paths smelling of incense and holy oil," the journal announced yesterday.

But a tolerance for Easter seems to cut across all generations. Russians who did not want to have their own

Kulich this year could buy one in the guise of a "spring cake"

at a state bakery.

Pope Paul VI offers traditional blessing at St. Peter's

Youth target of papal message

ROME — In an Easter message addressed especially to John's youth, Pope Paul VI said "Sunday" that "current values would take on new meaning if placed in the perspective of life after death.

Referring to the resurrection of Christ, the 79-year-old pontiff said: "This can be the optimistic transmutation of our way of thinking."

The pope spoke from his balcony overlooking St. Peter's Square. With each pause in his brief text, the thousand people gathered in the square below applauded and waved handkerchiefs in greeting to the pontiff.

"We believe that the young people of today are particularly predisposed to understand this good with which is full of hope and energy," the pontiff added. "Life is beautiful if it is new. It is new if it is good, if it is wise, and if it is strong. In a word, if it is Christian!"

Many children in the crowd, which spilled over into side streets and up the main avenue leading to St. Peter's, carried pastel-colored balloons filled with helium. The balloons, shaped in forms of animals, would all burst sometime during the Easter period.

The balloons, let go at the end of the ceremony, together with banners carrying greetings to the pontiff, filled the square with color.

After his message, the Pope wished the crowd a happy Easter. He delivered his message in 12 languages, including English, Arabic and Japanese.

The Pope then gave the crowd the traditional blessing — "urbi et orbi" — to the city of Rome and to the world — that concluded the 10-minute ceremony on the balcony.

— But the pope had celebrated an hour-long pontifical Mass at an outdoor altar erected on top of the stairs that led to the portico of St. Peter's. He personally administered communion to a group of pilgrims from Asia

North Africa and the Middle East.

Those watching the scene on television saw closeups of the Pope. He appeared rested and in full command after a grueling round of Holy Week activities.

Nixon pledged China ties

© N.Y. Times Service
WASHINGTON — Carter administration officials report that former President Richard Nixon told Chinese leaders in 1972 that he strongly desired to normalize relations with Peking and intended to do so in his second term if he was reelected that November.

The Nixon pledge, unknown until now, was not carried out largely because of the Watergate scandal. Key of officials in the Carter administration learned of it in the last few weeks as they went over the top-secret documents of the Nixon administration on China in preparing for a China policy of their own.

The officials said the statement by Nixon was recorded in a memorandum of subsequent years. And they have not discussed it with the Carter administration. "They have to assume that we're aware of the statement; they are probably too proud to talk about it," one official said.

Nixon became so weakened by Watergate, the officials said, that he obviously did not want to alienate the conservative members of Congress who had been the strongest adherents of close American ties with Taiwan and who were also his main supporters.

President Gerald R. Ford had the opportunity in 1975 to carry out the Nixon pledge, the officials said, but decided for similar domestic political reasons not to press ahead with normalization, which would include formal diplomatic relations with Peking and some rupture in the American defense treaty with Taiwan.

But the Carter officials said that their examination of the record did not show that the Chinese ever raised the pledge with American officials in subsequent years. And they have not discussed it with the Carter administration. "They have to assume that we're aware of the statement; they are probably too proud to talk about it," one official said.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 52-year-old widow who is being pursued by a bachelor in whom I have no interest. But HE is interested in ME. I work from 8 to 5, and when I come home I find him putting around in my garden, or sweeping my garage or driving by me. I am not interested in marriage, sex, love or a live-in companion. He said HE was.

I don't want to have him arrested for trespassing on my property or harassing me, because I don't think he's dangerous.

How can I get this man to leave me alone without going to the law?

NOT THAT LONESOME

Suitor off base

WE ARE NOT TELLING you will have him arrested if he doesn't stay off your property and quit bothering you. And if that doesn't work, you may have to call the police. He may not be dangerous, but you have a right to be left alone.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I gave our married son (who lives near us) a key to our home so he can come here to touch up on things when we're out of town.

Well, it seems that while we're away, he and his wife come in and borrow whatever they want. We don't even know what they've borrowed until we look for something and can't find it. It refers to serving trays, linens, card table covers, etc. I don't know what to do.

We've always been on good terms with our children and want to stay that way, but we think they have their nerve helping themselves to our things and not returning them.

Is there any way we can get our key back and put a stop to this without demanding it and hurting their feelings?

PHILADELPHIA PARENTS

DEAR PARENTS: What's wrong with the direct approach? Simply ask them to return: [a] the property they've borrowed; [b] the key. And don't be bashful about telling them.

DEAR ABBY: As a professional musician, I know I speak for all pianists and organists who have performed at parties and have wanted to tell the guests the following: Please do not...

1. Sit on the bench with me and engage me in conversation. It makes it impossible for me to perform. Please drinks on the organ or piano. (I've had whole drinks all on the keyboard and saturate the organ.)

2. Decide that you can play, too, and then proceed to fight with the keys while I am playing.

3. Sing loudly into my ear.

4. Abby, you would be doing all musicians a tremendous favor if you'd publish this.

R.G.R., THIBODEAUX, LA.

DEAR R.G.R.: Consider it done.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "NEW READER" IN BEND, OREGON: You've gone from bed to worse. Bend is a very small town for people with big mouths. Take my advice and move to Portland.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope, please.

your health

By LAWRENCE E. LAMB, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb: My husband is 70 and I am 68 years old. Your advice is to use skimpying, a quart a day. Each of us uses about three cups, some of buttermilk, most per cent buttermilk, partially skimmed milk.

My husband doesn't like completely skimmed milk. Do you think we get too much fat from the low-fat milk? Is the skin milk powder all right?

Our friends tell us they buy garlic pills and take one every day. They say they keep the arteries clean. Before we start this I would like to hear your opinion.

Dear Dr. Lamb: In the interests of avoiding an excess intake of fat and particularly saturated fat, it is wise to limit the amount of dairy fat in your diet. That is the only good reason to use skim milk as opposed to whole milk. The low-fat, two per cent fat milk is halfway between the two products. About a third of its calories are from fat as opposed to half in whole milk.

If you limit the fat in the rest of your diet that will not be too much of a burden on your fat intake budget. Buttermilk is a good choice for part of your milk intake. The non-fat dry milk powder is fine and is particularly useful in cooking.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 7-2, Milk Products: Good and Bad, to give you a table of the values for various milk products and information on milk. Others who want this information can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Just write to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 326, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10010.

Garlic won't help you unless it cuts down on your socializing and the inevitable eating accompanying any social gathering of our society. It is one of those useless health food fads that do nothing for you except tighten your pocketbook.

The idea that garlic helps is as old as Dosidores who first claimed it would clean out the arteries. The Egyptians fed it to their laborers to keep them strong while building the pyramids. One enthusiast advised everyone to put a piece of garlic in the rest every night before retiring. It is all nonsense. Garlic will not lower blood pressure, clean out your arteries, your digestive system or give you strength. All it cleans out is your pocketbook.

You'll need to stay on a good balanced diet that is moderately restricted in fats, particularly saturated fats and cholesterol.

Seahorse living, not fads, is the real route to health and longevity.

Dear Dr. Lamb: I was surprised to read in your column that some very young girls between the ages of 2 and 8 sometimes start menstruating and some have even become pregnant. Surely that is a misprint!

Answer: No. There is a misprint. It does occur along the production chain from me to your newspaper—but this is not one of them!

Thank you for your support.

Dr. Richard Kitzman, well known gynecologist from Harvard, discusses this in his text Gynecology, Principles and Practice (Our Book Publishers, 2nd Edition 1971 page 183). Usually when this occurs in very young girls there is some underlying disorder but it has happened in apparently normal girls.

Benji and friend, stars of a new Hollywood movie

Ragamuffin mutt stars in new movie

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Not since Lassie, the durable transvestite collie, has a canine wriggled its way into the hearts of moviegoers as has Benji, who started two years ago in a middle-brow movie of his own name.

A ragamuffin of a mutt with the sort-of adorable face that would evoke "aww" even from a vivisectionist, the pooch is starring in a sequel, "For the Love of Benji," due for release in June.

Benji's antecedents are suspect. But inasmuch as this is the era of the common man, why not the common dog?

His parents could have been a mixture of purebreds such as Poodle and Cocker Spaniels. Maybe even a grand mixture of Dachshund, Fox Terrier and Sheltie. Perhaps he is simply the issue of a union of curs. One may safely eliminate Great Danes, Cihuahuas and St. Bernards.

Whatever, the result is a cuddly, perky little dog with a scrappy brown and white coat and eyes that would melt the heart of a dogcatcher.

Benji is so beloved it is earning a fortune for the producers of his movies and his trainer, eighteen-licensed merchandise more than $8 million emblazoned with Benji's face and name. There are five different sizes of stuffed dogs in his likeness. There are four Benji board games, books, socks, sleeping bags, lunch boxes, and God knows what. Among the newest items is a T-shirt with the inscription "I Love Benji" below a photograph of the pooch.

The man most responsible for Benji's renown is Joe Camp, a displaced Tennesseean who is president of Mulberry Square Productions in Dallas.

Camp produces his pictures, writes the scripts, directs and helps edit the finished product. Thereafter he goes on the road to distribute the film himself, thus cutting out the middle men.

Camp comes to Hollywood as seldom as possible. "It is necessary for him to do post-production work here, sound recording, music scoring, mixing and film laboratory work."

But his star, Benji, lives here with trainer Frank Inn, and Joe likes to be in touch.

A canny showman who learned well, Camp has produced only two feature films, "Benji" and "Hawmps," a true story of an ill-fated camel-corpse which was trained in the American southwest for military purposes.

To his chagrin and astonishment, audiences didn't dig camp as much as they dug Benji. At least boxoffice receipts for "Hawmps" failed to come close to the stacks of millions "Benji" piled up.

So it is back to the surefire mutt in "For the Love of Benji." This time the little mongrel is lost in Athens, Greece.

"We think this is a lot better picture than the first one," Camp said. "The story is more sophisticated. It's no less fun for the 3-year-olds but a lot more fun for adults—it moves faster."

"Most of the human cast has rejoined us for the sequel—the kids, Cindy Smith and Allen Funtz are back and so is Patsy Garrett who plays their governess again."

With Benji's second picture completed, Camp is working on his fourth film, "MC and the Legend of Forever Snow," starring a dog thing—a talismanic dog.

The can, like Benji, has no pretensions to good breeding. MC is strictly an orange alley cat. He bears a slight resemblance to Morris, the television-commercial cat, which is hardly a claim to feline fame.

MC is also a discovery of Frank Inn, who thinks the cat has the potential to become as big as Benji.

"This is a friendly family-friended [omen] kind of picture," Camp said. "MC has some strange powers. It is a legend of unexplained phenomena in a mysterious castle."

"I think of it as a sort of a contemporary fairy story. It takes place at Neuschwanstein Castle in Bavaria, the same one Disney modeled his Cinderella Castle after."

"We're trying to make the sort of films no one else is doing," Camp said, including Disney. They are still producing the kind of pictures Walt made when he was alive. But if he were still around they'd be making different films because Walt Disney never died still."

After his cat epic, Joe will produce his first picture not built around animals.

It's a fairy story about contemporary Canine-as-it-might-be if it were rediscovered today."

Then, of course, there will be a second Benji sequel. Once a dog becomes as popular as Benji he's bound to off to the pound...

French professor studies primitive civilizations

By KEN HODGE

Times-News Writer

TWIN FALLS — Francois Bordes, professor of geology and prehistory at the University of Bordeaux, France, tells a story about an English sea captain who landed with his crew on a seemingly barren coast in Australia.

The captain and his men began a trek southward with few provisions. They nearly starved but, because they had no game to speak of along the barren Australian coast.

A tribe of aborigines found the starving Englishmen and, tapping what they considered to be abundant resources, fed the seamen turtle meat, lizards and "other" game and seafood plentiful along the shore.

Some time later, the English captain had an argument with the chief of the aborigine tribe and, in a fit of temper, called him a simple savage.

The chief responded by rebuking the Englishman that without the help of his tribe the sailors would probably have starved to death.

"You are still very thin, but I am fat," the native chief told the Englishman. "I have many wives, because they know I can feed them. You could not even feed yourself."

"Now, I ask you," continued the chief. "Who is the savage?"

Bordes, who is in Twin Falls this week visiting Don Gabretson, local archaeologist, says this Englishman illustrates one reason he is interested in the work he does.

He says by studying the remains of primitive civilizations, modern man can learn much about their way of life and the technology they used to survive.

He says even though other societies may appear to be primitive and even "savage," modern, "civilized" man can learn much from their way of life.

He says people who live in countries with modern technology get vain and think they are much better off than "savages" who live close to nature.

A man born today, according to Bordes, has to learn to be civilized; he is not born so.

A man is born with the same kinds of instincts people were born with centuries ago and not any more brain power, either, says Bordes, who is making a circuit of the United States on his trip to visit friends and to lecture at a few American universities about Australian prehistory.

Bordes, in addition to his professional duties at the University of Bordeaux, is director of the Institute for Pleistocene research there.

"I am actually a geologist by training," Bordes says about his interests. "I was always interested in rocks."

He says, however, it is impossible to study geology without studying prehistory and little technology of the people who lived in early times.

He said he picked up his first flint piece when he was 7 years old and began his first excavation when he was 14.

Now he says the university is leading about 15 different excavations, which he oversees, in France and other places in the world.

In 1964 "Bordes" through his interest in primitive technology and tool making techniques, met Crabtree, a Twin Falls resident, who grew up in the Salmon River country. They have been friends ever since.

Their friendship grew out of a common interest in little technology.

Crabtree, who successfully duplicated techniques of stone tool making, and Bordes, working in different parts of the world, had different tools and technology to share when they first met.

Bordes plans to return to Australia and continue studies of its prehistory. He hopes to excavate and find traces of the first men to arrive in the "Land Down Under" nearly 40,000 years ago.

"There is much to be learned by comparing the pleistocene period in Australia to that of France," Bordes maintains.

He says the subsistence patterns of ancient Australian peoples are very different from those of prehistoric civilizations in Europe, but there are a surprisingly great number of similarities.

Different tools found on the two continents reflect different uses for killing different kinds of animals and doing different jobs, Bordes says.

He said in Australia, where game is com-pared with the kind of hunting, hunters never missed even the smallest of animals and often missed them they sometimes moved as many as 40 miles a day in search of food.

He said aborigines living in the wide open spaces of Australia knew practically every stone on the land and even gave the larger ones names. He said a tribe could leave a place in the relatively unmarked landscape and return months later to exactly the same spot with no trouble at all, whereas men from other countries could not find one place in the area in another.

He is interested in the modern lithic technology of the aborigines, too. He says there is nothing in the North American continent to compare with the technology of Australia.

In addition to his interests in geology and prehistory, Bordes is a prolific writer. His name can be found in many anthologies of archaeology.

He recently contributed to the Life Nature Library on Early Man, and the work includes illustrations of his work with stone tool making.

In addition, for a hobby, Bordes writes science fiction.

"You have something to do on the side," he explains.

Officials back farm payments hike

WASHINGTON (UPI) — White House officials have agreed to back Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland in endorsing an increase in the current $20 billion ceiling on most direct government payments to farmers.

"But that position could change quickly if Congress rewrites either administration farm proposals," Bergland warns.

Under existing law, farmers who grow grains and cotton are limited to 80 percent of farm-in price support and disaster payments on their crops. For rice, the ceiling is $55,000.

Bergland told House and Senate Agriculture Committee members earlier this month he would support a single $30,000 per-crop limit on support payments for grain, cotton and rice. The ceiling of all disaster payments for producers of those crops.

Initially, Bergland conceded the idea was a personal suggestion which had not yet been cleared by the White House. Late last week, however, he told reporters the White House had agreed to the idea and would back it.

But there's a catch, he said. The catch is that as things stand, the higher ceiling would in practice affect only wheat growers. And Bergland's backing for the plan would be withdrawn if Congress rewrites the administration's proposed omnibus farm bill in a way which would make large numbers of other farmers eligible for big payments.

The agriculture secretary explained he proposed the $35,000 figure, which would be a major increase for grain and cotton growers and a slight decline for rice, partly because the program is designed to avoid the use of direct income payments for feed grain and cotton growers, so raising the payment ceiling for them is an academic exercise.

Also, Bergland said, he proposed the payment ceiling because other features of the proposed new farm program included increases in crop support loan rates for corn and other feed grains, but no increase in the loan rate for wheat.

Under that complicated package,

Bergland noted, the corn support loan rate would be raised to $2 per bushel in 1978 and would be set above the "target" price which triggers direct payments to farmers. This means corn growers would get no direct payments on the 1978 crop — making a greater increase in support target prices — and perhaps as in some crop loan prices — than the administration has proposed.

Wheat growers, on the other hand, would have their crop support loan rate held down to the current $2.25 a bushel. They might have to depend for part of their income on government payments covering the gap between market prices and a 1978 "target" which the administration wants to set at $2.60 a bushel.

Unlike the corn growers, however, wheat farmers would have a limit on a portion of their potential income — the $20,000 per farm payment ceiling, Bergland noted.

So "it's only fair" to raise the payment ceiling, Bergland said, because this move — primarily affecting wheat growers — would help make up for the difference between the way the proposed new bill treats wheat and corn.

Since Bergland's proposal emerged, however, congressional farm bloc leaders have indicated they are likely to vote greater increases in support target prices — and perhaps as in some crop loan prices — than the administration has proposed.

House subcommittees, for example, have already tentatively approved wheat, corn, rice and cotton targets above the rates proposed by the administration. In many cases, they would open the way for potential substantial direct support payments to growers of those crops if markets fall below target levels.

If Congress redesigns the farm bill this way, Bergland told reporters, he would abandon his support for a $30,000 ceiling and $2.60 a bushel.

Even if Bergland stands by his $30,000 proposal, it may be in trouble. Rep. Paul Findley, R-Ill., has announced plans for a House floor fight to keep the payment ceiling at $20,000 or, even, to lower it to $15,000.

SCS said its new inventory will supply basic data to estimate the amount of sediment removed of the land by water and wind erosion, and will also provide information on soil and water conservation needs, water quality, land use, and the status of prime and potential cropland.

Officials will begin next month to visit 72,500 sample sites to gather data for measurements of common types of water and wind erosion on farmland.

Utah cites sales growth

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Based on sales tax revenues, 1976 business activity in Utah resumed the strong growth pattern begun in the earlier years of the 1970s decade, says the Utah Foundation.

In its annual tax study, the non-profit business organization said sales volume in Utah in 1976 — as measured by sales tax receipts — totaled $5.4 billion. The foundation said that showed a gain of 14 percent over 1975.

"But after adjustments are made for inflation, the effective real-growth in sales volume last year amounted to 7.8 percent," the foundation said. "However, this adjusted real gain compares favorably with adjusted increases of only 2.3 percent in 1975 and a meager 0.7 percent during the 1974 recession year."

UF said, the increased business activity in the state last year "was a reflection of a strong economy and a growing job market." During 1976 nearly 27,000 new jobs were created in Utah.

This rate of growth is substantially greater than the average increases of 3 percent per year in the 1960-65 period, and the 2.5 percent annual gain in the 1965-70 period."

MV hosts bridge tournament

TWIN FALLS — The biggest bridge event of the year for Magic Valley is coming to the Holiday Inn in Twin Falls from Thursday to Sunday.

This sectional bridge tournament is being sponsored by Twin Falls Unit, which consists of all the duplicate bridge clubs in Magic Valley.

Players from Utah, Oregon, Montana, Boise, Pocatello and Idaho Falls are expected to join local players at this tournament.

This sectional will begin at 8 p.m. on Thursday with a one-session event entitled "Magic Valley Pairs." On Friday an Unlimited Pairs event is scheduled for 1:30 p.m. That evening at 8 there will be two events — the master pairs for players with over 20 master points and the Novice Pairs for those with less than 20 points.

A two-session Open Pairs event will be held on Saturday afternoon at 1:30 and 8. At 1:30 there will also be a side game Snake River Pairs and at 8, an Open Pairs Consolation for the nonqualifiers and new entrants.

The sectional will conclude on Sunday with a two-session "Teams" event — at 10:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Each team consists of four "players" and will play four rounds each given to the winner of each event.

Ketchum names month to save energy, jobs

KETCHUM — The Ketchum Mayor and City Council Thursday declared April "Save Electricity-Save Jobs" month and have asked each citizen to "voluntarily curtail electricity use by 10 percent."

In recognition of a general drought-caused emergency and of a request by Gov. John Evans that each citizen voluntarily reduce his use of electricity, the City Council and acting Mayor Martha Polteva signed an official proclamation Thursday asking "each individual citizen to accept this responsibility and to themselves for the benefit of all."

The symbolic act of the proclamation is in response to the unprecedented drought and extremely poor snowpack here, which are expected to result in the lowest summer river-flows in recorded history.

The predicted low riverflows will not be sufficient to produce the total amount of hydrogen required to meet the region's normal needs for electric energy, Ketchum's proclamation states.

The proclamation also notes that a shortage of electric energy will have an adverse effect upon employment, and the area's economy and general welfare.

The adverse effects of an electric shortage can be minimized by each citizen reducing electric usage now to save water in storage reservoirs for the generation of electricity later in the year, the proclamation states.

Ketchum City Administrator Jim Jacquet says the original proclamation was made by the government committee which is in Ketchum to notify its residents that this is of concern not only to the governor, but to this city and its citizens.

"It's part of a statewide campaign that's trying to educate all the citizens that we are probably going to have a power shortage this summer and that by conserving this month we can generate power later in the summer," the city administrator commented about the proclamation.

The proclamation also notes that a

Outcome saddens journalist

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The "Israel" journalist who almost singlehandedly brought down Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin says he feels "a certain personal sadness" at what happened, but it proved everyone must obey the law.

Dan Margalit, 39, Washington correspondent of the independent Israeli newspaper Haaretz, broke the story about an illegal Washington bank account which led Rabin to resign Thursday as the Labor party's candidate in the May 17 elections.

Margalit compared the scandal, and Rabin's alleged attempts to cover it up, to the Watergate case which caused Richard Nixon to resign the U.S. presidency.

Margalit knew Rabin personally, and liked him, but says his ability to lead us was very bad and he couldn't communicate with the world's Jews very well.

Virus concerns growers

TWIN FALLS — The only official source of information on the leaf roll virus and potato seed is the handbook published by the Idaho Crop Improvement Assn., according to two extension entomologists.

Larry Sandvol and Robert Stoltz, University of Idaho extension personnel from eastern and southcentral

Idaho respectively, say farmers have shown special concern over what about potato leaf roll virus in seed stocks.

The concern has arisen in light of leaf roll virus which has reached epidemic proportions in Magic Valley.

If growers want to be assured of buying the best possible virus-free seed, they should consult the handbook.

According to the surveys, the aphid counts for most areas in Idaho using trap pans and leaf counts, the two entomologists say.

The information is general to certain areas and is used to indicate aphid populations in the area; not in any particular field.

According to the surveys, the aphid counts for most areas in Idaho are considered to be quite low, although counts varied from field to field.

Camas planners review agricultural zoning

By LORAYNE O. SMITH
Times-News writer

FAIRFIELD — Camas County Planning and Zoning Commission members are reviewing the county comprehensive plan with the goal of keeping the county a legally zoned agriculture area.

Mrs. Boyd Eklund, commission secretary, said today: "We are still trying to preserve the agriculture basis of our county. Without comprehensive planning, subdivision and zoning ordinances we'll lose it."

Camas County has had both ordinances and the comprehensive plan in effect for some years. The plan provides for a yearly review which is now under way.

"While no major flaws have appeared in the plan since it was adopted about three years ago, Mrs. Eklund said planners expect to make some changes in wording."

"When it came out there was a lot of flowery language," Mrs. Eklund said. "We're trying to reduce it down to a basic outline rather than pie in the sky type writing."

She said the Camas County commissioners agree with the planning group that "we want to save and protect the agriculture land in the county."

But, considering the opposition to the concept of land use reported in some other area counties, Mrs. Eklund said, "By the time we get all our documents reviewed someone probably will be against them, too."

She said the primary concept of the county plan is to retain Camas County for agriculture use.

"Our county is unique in that we have a high water table in some areas," Mrs. Eklund said. "Development in such sections would be disastrous, both to the buyer and the developer."

The town of Fairfield, she said, is built on a swamp and down through the years "hundreds of dollars have been put into streets just to maintain a gravel road." Even as dry as it is this year there still is sump water causing holes in the streets.

In contrast, certain areas of Camas Prairie have no underground water at all.

With these two types of problems, Mrs. Eklund said, planners feel that allowing development would create a "buyer beware" situation they want to avoid.

Last May when the comprehensive plan was first reviewed, the commissioners decreased the number of living units per square mile to five. Any proposed building beyond that amount would require rezoning.

Mrs. Eklund said another purpose in reviewing the comprehensive plan is to "try to avoid pinpointing certain areas as development areas which inflates the price of land."

The current development on private land near Soldier Mountain ski resort was subdivided before the county ordinances were adopted, Mrs. Eklund said.

The planning group last month approved a request to increase the housing density allowed on land owned by both Lin Vansickle, Fairfield, and Soldier Mountain Properties.

The Peacock Mine subdivision, begun east of Fairfield some time ago by a Boise developer in "limbo," the secretary said, because only a very small flow of water has been obtained in drilling for wells.

Rupert woman found guilty

RUPERT — A Rupert woman, Irene Helen Santos, has been found guilty on two counts of failure to deposit trust fund taxes with the U.S. in violation of the Internal Revenue Code.

The verdict was announced following a two-day jury trial in U.S. District Court in Boise. The trust fund taxes were those withheld by an employer from the employee's pay check for federal income tax and Social Security tax purposes. Mrs. Santos and her husband Manuel Santos, own the S and S Trucking Co., Rupert.

Judge F. W. Taylor Sr., who heard the case, ordered a presentence investigation and withheld sentence pending the report. Mrs. Santos faces a maximum of one year in prison and $3,000 fine or both on each count.

Area expected to open today

TIMMERMAN HILL — The Timmerman Hill rest area adjacent to U.S. 93 is expected to be open again today after nearly a week's closure.

The closure resulted from a breakdown in the main pump which operates the sewage system for the rest area, according to Howard Johnson, Shoshone, district engineer for the Idaho Highway Department which built the rest area.

Johnson said the shaft twisted off the main pump. If there is no problem with installation, the equipment should be back in working order today.

The rest area opened last September, after considerable criticism about the cost of the toilet facilities, estimated at $225,000.

TF woman injured

TWIN FALLS — An 18-year-old Twin Falls woman suffered severe neck, chest, back and leg injuries in a two-car collision in the South Park area Sunday night.

The woman, Rebecca Gee, was listed today in fair condition in Magic Valley Memorial Hospital.

A car driven by Gee and one driven by Irma Baxter, 59, Filer, collided about 1 1/2 miles west of Washington Street South on South Park Avenue West, a Twin Falls County sheriff's deputy reported.

Pre-sentence investigation

TWIN FALLS — Fifth District Judge James Cunningham has ordered a pre-sentence investigation to be conducted by the state parole and probation office before he sentences convicted murderer Juan M. Garcia.

A local jury last week found Garcia guilty of second-degree murder for the fatal stabbing of a College of Southern Idaho coed in her Twin Falls apartment. Garcia was charged with first-degree murder in connection with the Nov. 17 death of Catherine Garrison, 18.

The jury apparently found him guilty of the lesser charge because the prosecution failed to show "premeditation and deliberation" by Garcia to murder Garrison, the judge said.

Garcia faces from 10 years to life imprisonment.

Several South Hills roads close

TWIN FALLS — Because of excessive damage to soft roadbeds, several U.S. Forest Service roads in the South Hills will be closed to all motor vehicle travel except for over-night snowmachines until June 10 or until the roads are dry enough to prevent roadbed damage.

All of the closed roads will be posted at the points of closure. "Road Closed Ahead" signs will be posted at the turnoffs of major roads leading to the closed roads.

As the roadsides dry, the closure signs will be moved accordingly by forest service personnel.

The following roads are closed:

Oakley-Rogerson road from two miles inside the forest boundary to Porcupine Springs Campground — 22.5 miles.

Oakley-Rogerson road from the junction with Rock Creek Road at Magic Mountain-Ski-Area west to the South Fork of Shoshone Creek Junction — 7.7 miles.

McClure ponders SNRA hearings

By CHRISTOPHER BOGAN
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — Idaho Sen. James McClure is contemplating some manner of "oversight" review of the Sawtooth National Recreation Area (SNRA), according to officials in the senator's Washington office.

One type of review being considered is public hearings which could be held during the summer, officials indicate.

"We're exploring a means of having some oversight," Kit Caples, one of McClure's legislative assistants, said last week. "We're kicking around ways to get at certain problems."

"We feel the committee [the Senate Parks and Recreation Subcommittee of which McClure is a member] should be taking some looks, whether that be through a hearing process or a public hearing."

McClure's press secretary, Ted Neuenschwander, said in order to hold an oversight hearing permission must first be granted by the Senate subcommittee and the Dept. of Interior.

"Two primary areas of concern exist which would be examined in a Senate oversight of the SNRA, according to Caples."

They include the administration of the area, focusing on the policy by which private lands and some easements are purchased in order to preserve and protect the area.

"In general, people up there have been concerned about what they may call an arbitrary way of determining who can hold a cabin or who will be bought out and then with the negotiations and the value set on the property," Caples said. "Some feel they haven't been paid what they feel the property is worth."

Also, Caples said of particular concern to McClure is the situation involving privately-owned mineral claims in the SNRA and whether they will be developed or bought out by the federal government in order to protect the interest of the area.

It could be a "phenomenal cost to buy out mineral claims," Caples pointed out. It could even go as high as a billion dollars in payments, according to Caples.

"I think it's also fair to say mining interests just don't know what's going to happen," Neuenschwander said. "Most of the area holds private mining claims and it's hard to tell their mineral wealth. But in terms of private claims, and buying them out, some projects could go into the millions to buy."

"How much? ... What is the price tag on mineral interests? ... I think that's McClure's main area of concern," Neuenschwander said. "If we're going to pay in that area, we'll have to decide can the taxpayers afford it. It's almost a policy situation right now rather than specific cases."

SNRA Minerals Management Assistant Harry Young admitted private mining claims can be expensive to purchase.

"Mining claims within a small tract of ground can contain tremendous values," Young stated.

"I would be remiss if I said more than that. You just have to know what particular claim you're dealing with and the data in establishing the value."

Young also said the SNRA is potentially very rich in mineral deposits.

"The USGS [United States Geological Survey] made a rather extensive study several years ago and they said this area has a tremendous mineral potential which probably is only exceeded by the Coeur d'Alenes," Young commented.

The area contains silver, lead, tungsten, gold, tin, zinc, cadmium and other mineral deposits, according to Young.

Under present policy, Young said the SNRA is evaluating all private mineral claims to determine if they meet federal mining law requirements to establish a profitable mine.

If a claim meets these requirements, it is classified as non-contestable by the SNRA. But if it does not meet these standards, the SNRA will contest the claim, the claim through a federal procedure set by the Department of Interior.

Between 1,200 and 1,500 private mining claims have already been evaluated in the SNRA and only 10 percent, just over 100 claims, were classified as non-contestable, according to Young.

He estimated there are between 5,000 and 7,000 private mining claims in the SNRA.

Young said to date the government has not bought any private mining claims in an effort to preserve the qualities of the SNRA.

Hearing scheduled on power line plan

TWIN FALLS — Idaho Power Co.'s proposal to construct a major power line between a substation near Eden and the Nevada border will be considered in a public hearing next month in Twin Falls.

The utility company proposes to construct the Idaho portion of the 315-kilovolt line which will run from the Hunt substation to Reno, Nevada.

The Idaho Public Utilities Commission will conduct an initial hearing on the proposal at the Blue Lakes Inn May 9, starting at 1:30 p.m. The hearing will be limited to presentation of Idaho Power's case, clarifying questions, and public testimony.

In its application, Idaho Power says the line would initially be used to transport power that Nevada's Sierra-Pacific Power Co. has agreed to purchase from Utah Power and Light Co.

The line also would be available for the interchange of power with Sierra-Pacific when available, according to the application.

Idaho Power estimates the cost of its portion of the line would be about $4 million. The utility says the remainder of the line from the Nevada border to Reno would be owned and operated by Sierra-Pacific.

Construction of the Idaho portion of the line would be financed by internally-generated cash, short-term borrowings and the issuance of stocks and/or bonds, according to the application. Some of the costs would be borne by Sierra-Pacific, the company says.

Early AF water at 60%

SHOSHONE — The American Falls Reservoir District No. 2 and the Big Wood Canal Co. directors decided Friday to continue delivering water at 60 per cent of normal the rest of this month and during May.

The alternative would be to turn the water off now and then start it with a 75 per cent delivery the first of May.

Most of the water users in the Shoshone and Gooding areas were opposed to any cutoff.

According to Leo Bush of the Bureau of Reclamation, American Falls probably will not be on storage until about Tuesday or Wednesday.

A large majority of water users at Hunt prefer turning the water off when American Falls goes on storage and leaving it off until about May 1.

The boards decided that this was possible and the Hunt water users could draw enough extra water through May to catch them up on the rest of the project.

On June 1 the water will be increased to 75 per cent and delivered at that rate until the water runs out about the middle of August.

Diesel drivers start unit to train young truckers

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls chapter of Junior Diesel Drivers International, begun two months ago, hopes to train young truckers and "get some conscientious people on the road." Patrick Montgomery hopes to increase the membership and held a meeting for that purpose Saturday.

Anyone 17 or older can join.

"If a young driver, 20 or 21, wants to join, and better himself and help build the club or share his experiences with the other boys, he can do that," Patrick said.

A trucking show is planned for April 27-29, if facilities can be found. The show will have exhibits of diesels and CIB radios by dealers. Interstate Mack is helping sponsor the Junior Diesel Drivers show.

"It'll be a big show of exhibits for checking out the whole trucking scene," Patrick said. He said that local merchants, who think they have products truck drivers would be interested in and who want to exhibit at the show can contact Patrick at 837-9176, or attend the next junior drivers meeting April 18 at the R and R Cafe, Bullock at 7:30 p.m.

The basic purpose of the Junior Diesel Drivers organization is to help young men who plan to be truck drivers. Members are taught about driving, making repairs and obtaining chauffeurs licenses. Dues are $15 a year.

Members will also get instruction on the operation of CIB radios and the rules and regulations.

TF truckers
start group

JUNIOR Diesel Drivers International have organized to train young truckers. The Twin Falls chapter has eight members and Patrick Montgomery, President, Hagerman, hopes to increase the membership. The group plans a trucking show April 27 to 29 if facilities can be found. The show will exhibit any item interesting to truckers.

Nicklaus rally falls short, Watson wins Masters title

AUGUSTA, Ga. (UPI) — Ending any doubts about his ability to withstand pressure, Tom Watson survived a showdown with golf's most feared competitor, Jack Nicklaus, and won the Masters golf tournament Sunday by two strokes.

Watson, a 27-year-old who has attracted an unfortunate reputation for wilting in the stretch, sank a 15-foot birdie putt at the 17th hole to earn the $40,000 first prize and the green jacket awarded to the winner of this traditional southern festival.

His final round score, a sunder-par 67, gave him a total of 276 for 72 holes, 12 under par, and made him the youngest Masters champion since Nicklaus began dominating this tournament in the 1960's.

Nicklaus, a five-time winner here, gave it a superb run. He shot the best round of the tournament, 66. It just simply was not enough.

Three strokes behind at the start of the day, Nicklaus finally caught Watson at the 14th hole when Watson three-putted from 50 feet below the cup on the humpback green.

Playing in successive twosomes at the tail end of the field, first Nicklaus, then Watson birdied the 15th hole and parred the 16th.

At 17, a 400-yard par-4 where Arnold Palmer hit the crucial shot that enabled him to win two of his four Masters titles, Nicklaus barely missed his try for a birdie. Then Watson came along behind him, and made his.

Watson got some breathing room when Nicklaus, who heard the crowd's roar for the birdie as he walked down the 18th fairway, dumped his approach shot at the final hole into a bunker and made a bogey.

But Watson did not really need it. He made a routine par on the final hole.

Nicklaus, a Masters runnerup for the third time, finished at 16-under-par 278.

Rik Massengale, who also made a game run at Watson before fading on the back nine, and his former University of Texas teammate, Tom Kite, shared third place with 280 total. Massengale, one of the leaders of the tour's Bible study group and winner earlier this year of the Bob Hope Desert Classic, had a 70 Sunday and Kite had a 67 which included seven birdies.

Hal Irwin, the 1974 U.S. Open champion, was next at 68-232. Lou Graham, the 1975 Open winner, tied at 294 with Australian David Graham following identical rounds of 69.

Disheartened Ben Crenshaw, who shared the third-round lead with Watson, ballooned to a horrendous 76 and was in a group of six players at 285. That group also included Ray Floyd, the record-tying winner of this tournament last year; Hubert Green, Don January, Gene Littler and John Schieff.

Crenshaw did not make a birdie until the 15th hole and by then it was too little, too late. He made double-bogey at the short 12th, dumping his tee shot into water, and even his normally sure putting touch deserted him when he three-putted from 15 feet at the 13th after reaching the green of the par-5 hole in two shots.

Paired with Nicklaus in the next-to-last group, Crenshaw had said before starting he anticipated the round would be "half fun and half work." It turned out to be all work and the fabled Crenshaw smile was not seen.

Crenshaw dropped out of contention early, bogeying the second and third holes, and after that it was a three-man race among Watson, Massengale and Nicklaus, with Kite struggling valiantly to make up distant ground.

Watson, the 1975 British Open champion and winner of four U.S. tour titles, took charge to become this year's top money winner now with $175,105 and winner of more than $700,000 in a six-year career.

He birdied four holes in a row, the fifth through the eighth. That came after Nicklaus made his presence known early with birdies on the opening two holes and after Massengale, one down at the start of the day, caught Watson with a birdie at No. 2.

At the turn, Watson led Massengale by one shot and Nicklaus by four, but Massengale hit his approach shot into a bunker at No. 10 and missed the green at No. 11 and never was a factor again.

"Those two bogeys cost me," Massengale said. "I didn't have a chance to choke at the end. There was a lot more pressure coming in on Tom and Jack. Tom didn't say anything after he made that birdie putt at 17, but he was pretty excited."

That put Watson one up on Nicklaus and any chance Nicklaus had to win it disappeared with his shot into the bunker.

Nicklaus turned to Crenshaw in disgust and said, "I had a little too much club in my hand. I quit on the ball."

That was the only bogey of the day for Nicklaus, who made seven birdies. Watson also made seven birdies, but had two bogeys.

TOM WATSON silenced his detractors, who said he couldn't win under pressure by holding off a furious Jack Nicklaus charge Sunday to win the Masters Golf Championship. Watson clinched the victory with a birdie on the 17th hole (above).

Indians, Bosox set record with 19 runs in one inning

BOSTON (UPI) — Buddy Bell and Duane Kuiper each drove in three runs with a pair of hits in the eighth inning Sunday to highlight a 13-run rally that carried the Cleveland Indians to a record-setting 19-9 rout of the Boston Red Sox.

With the game tied at 3-3, the Indians sent 17 batters to the plate. In the eighth, and collected 10 hits, three walks and were gifted a Red Sox error. The scoring barrage fell one short of Cleveland's club record for a single inning, set in 1959 against the Philadelphia A's.

Boston had six times in the last half of the inning as the two teams combined to set an American League record of 19 runs in one inning. The old record was 17 set by Detroit, and Boston in 1953.

The inning, which took 53 minutes to play, began when Rick Manning fed off with a triple and scored the go-ahead run on a single by Duane Kuiper. After a sacrifice and a walk, pinch-hitter John Lowenstein singled home Kuiper. Pinch-hitter Paul Dade and Buddy Bell followed with runscoring doubles and after an error and a walk, Kuiper knocked in two more runs with a double.

Rookie Jim Norris, who hit his first major-league homer in the fourth, followed with a runscoring double and, after a walk, pinch-hitter Charlie Spinks singled in the 10th run.

Gooding slates airport hearing

GOODING — Anyone interested in using the Gooding airport is invited to a public meeting at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday at the city hall to discuss the master plan for the facility.

John Priester, engineer from the firm of Hamilton and Voeller, Twin Falls, said representatives from the Federal Aviation Agency (FAA) regional office in Seattle, and the State Aeronautics Board, Boise, will attend to provide data about governmental regulations.

Priester and Pat Flanagan, with the Hamilton firm in Boise, will conduct the meeting.

Priester said a survey questionnaire is available at the airport and the Gooding city hall or can be obtained from any member of the Gooding airport commission.

Pilots and others interested are encouraged to fill out the questionnaire, Priester said.

his engineering firm is anxious to get as many suggestions as possible about the future, intended use and needs for the municipal airport.

Among the 10 possible improvements are runway overlay, parallel taxiway, improved lighting, approach aids, tildowns and parking aprons, hangars for rent or lease, increased services for fixed-base operators, general aviation terminal facilities, vehicle parking and flying club or aircraft rental.

The engineers want to get as much input as possible about future use before completing the master plan, Priester said.

Use and size requirements and funding will be the major points of discussion Wednesday night. Priester said a later part of the master plan will be to zone the airport for different uses such as crop dusting operation and private hangars.

The main activity at the airport is crop dusting and spraying operations through the summer season. About a dozen area plots keep planes there.

Priester said there is no reason the airport cannot pay its way if there is increased use by commercial and private pilots.

Fisher calls limit law a 'joke'

By United Press International

East coast fishermen who clamored for the new 200-mile fishing limit say the six-week-old law is no help at all unless the federal government agrees to take harsh action against foreign violators.

"The 200-mile limit is a joke, a farce and a hoax," said Michael Orlando, head of the 600-member Fisheries Union in Gloucester, Mass. "We appreciate what the Coast Guard is doing, but they have their hands tied by the State Department."

Fishermen and politicians were angered when the Coast Guard recently found violations by four Soviet fishing trawlers off the Massachusetts coast, but did not seize the offending ships.

There were reports the State Department, with an eye to detente, influenced the Coast Guard's decisions.

"Obviously there has been a conflict between the Coast Guard, which wanted to seize the ships, and the State Department, which said let them go with fines," said Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.,

whose proposal to investigate enforcement of the new law was accepted by the Senate Commerce Committee last week.

Officials in Texas, Mississippi, northern and southern California, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida and Louisiana, all reported few or no violations of the new 200-mile limit.
